Problem Statement:

Many people have a shopping list that they use repeatedly. Our app helps users stay organized and watch their spending by tracking purchase history. The app can send out reminders on what to buy and the user can adjust how much they want to spend in a specific time period.

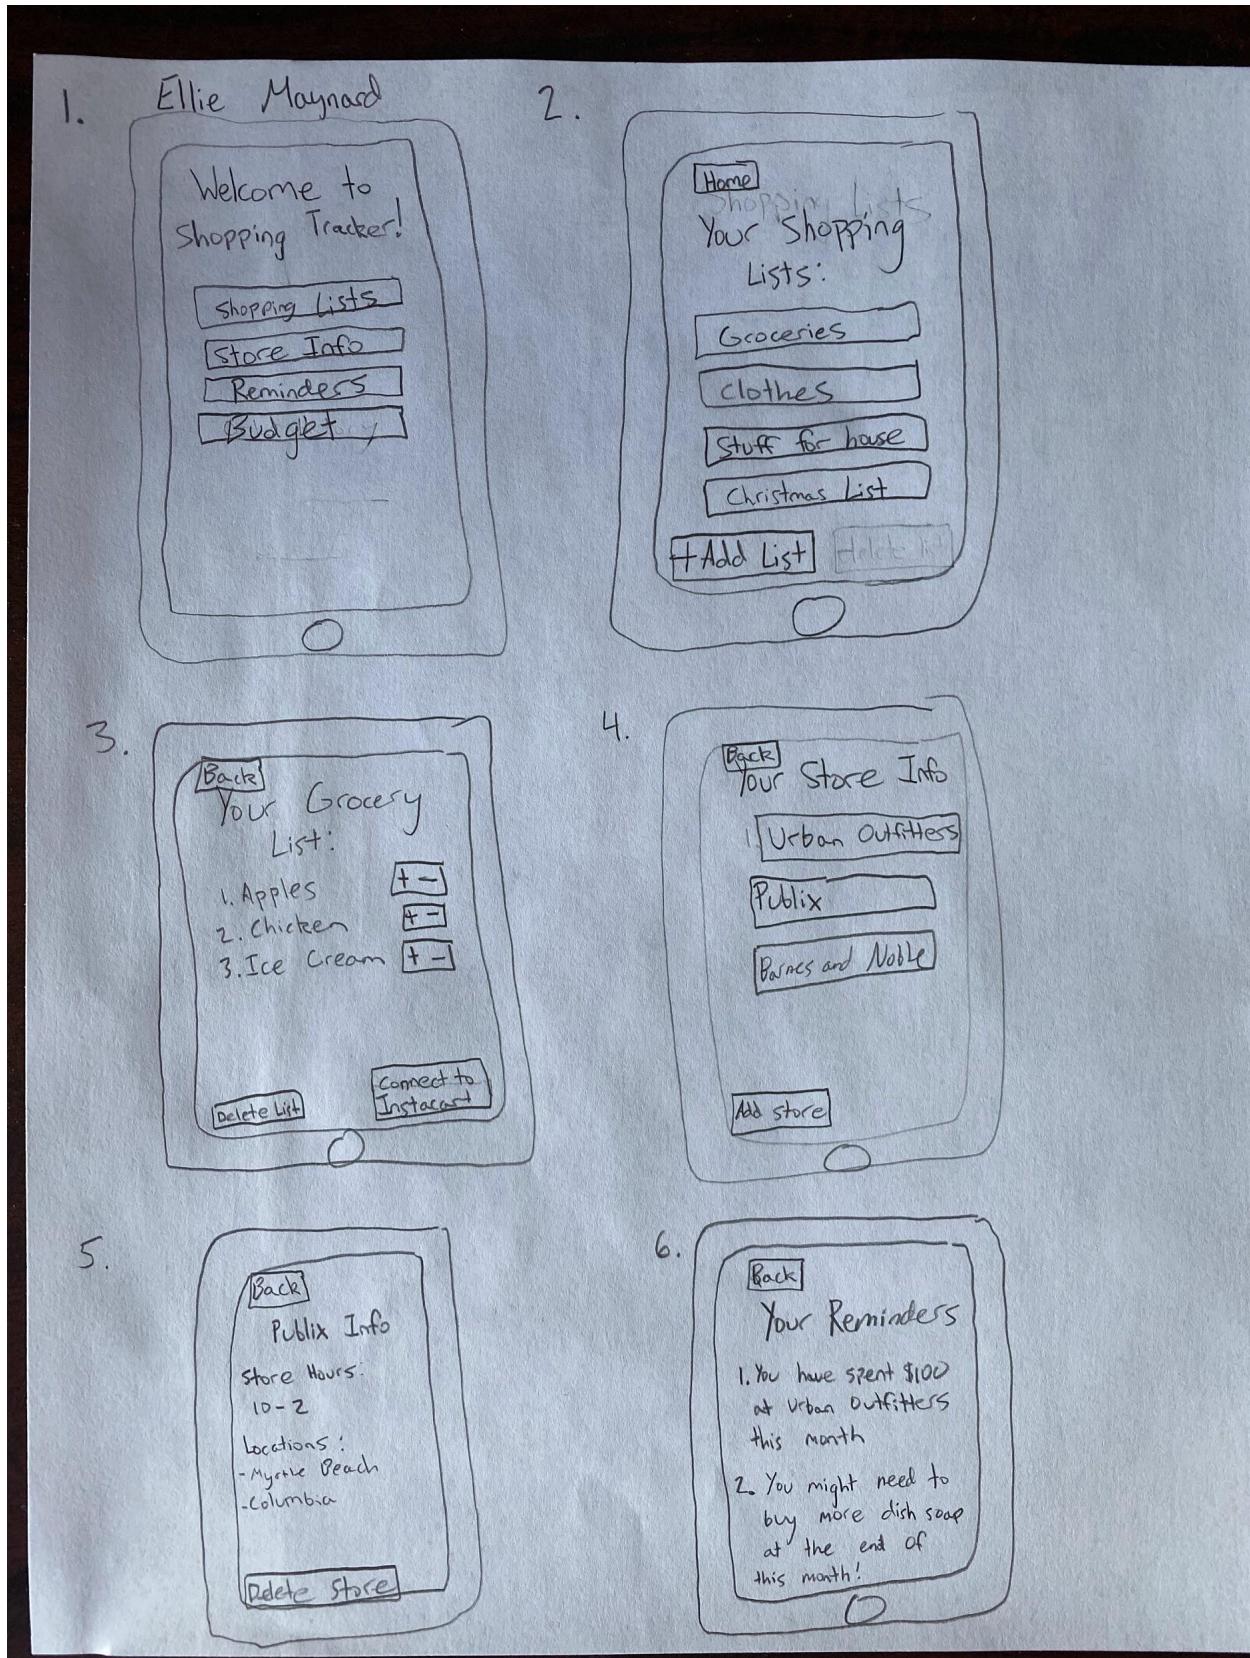

Who is experiencing the problem: People with limited budgeting experience and people who tend to be forgetful.

What is the problem: Overspending and not staying organized, someone running out of the items that they need

Where does the problem present itself: Shopping and entertainment, transportation, grocery, household items

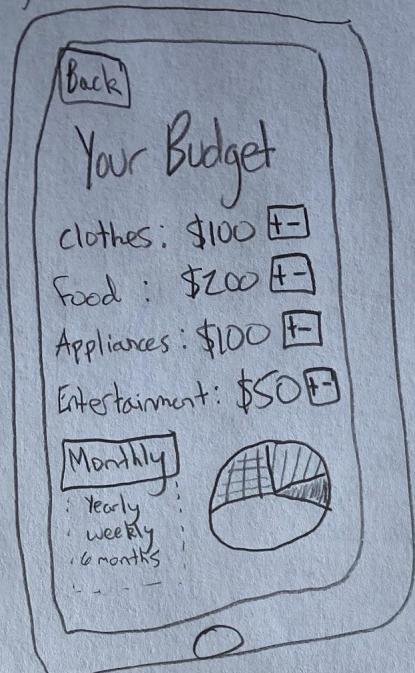

Why does it matter: Helps people balance their budget and stay organized.

Ex. If someone purchases a 6 pack of paper towel rolls at the beginning of every month, this app would track that and remind them at the start of each month so they don't forget to buy a new pack.

The diagram illustrates a mobile application interface for managing spending. At the top right, a note says "Enter w/ keyboard". The main area features a large rounded rectangle containing several input fields and labels:

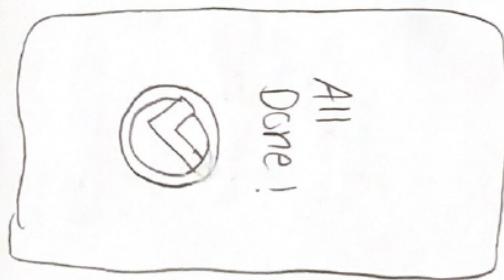

- A top-left input field labeled "150.00" with a "10" button below it.
- To the right of the first field is a label: "Choose max spending limit".
- Below the first field is another input field with a "10" button below it.
- To the right of the second field is a label: "Enter max distance from current location".
- At the bottom right is a label: "up & down by $1 increments".

Below the main rounded rectangle, there is a legend:

- "e" with a small arrow pointing up and down.
- "m" with a small arrow pointing left and right.
- "r" with a small circle.
